L&T Infotech center in Belfast

TOI Tech, Jun 25, 2010, 05.19pm IST

NEW DELHI: L&T Infotech has announced that it would invest in setting up a European software development and maintenance center in Belfast, Northern Ireland.

The investment, which is supported by Invest Northern Ireland (Invest NI), is expected to help create 85 jobs in Northern Ireland during the next one year.

The Belfast Center will be located in the Northern Ireland Science Park and will serve as a right shore center for L&T Infotech to help it enhance its presence in the European market. The Center will be involved in development work for all of the company's services and products.

Sudip Banerjee, Chief Executive Officer, L&T Infotech, said, "We are delighted to be in Northern Ireland and value the support and encouragement we have received from Invest NI.

We see tremendous opportunities in providing leading companies in the UK and Europe with our world-class solutions and will be looking to grow our business rapidly in the coming years.

This new Center will support both European and other global clients. Northern Ireland has a proven track record in providing a large pool of talented people and an extremely conducive business environment and we intend to leverage this to our global advantage."

Alastair Hamilton, Chief Executive of Invest NI, said, "L&T Infotech is now the latest globally respected IT company to choose Northern Ireland as the location from which to expand international operations.

With Belfast recently surveyed as the second most popular city for inward investment in the UK, today's announcement further demonstrates the strength of our skills base and IT infrastructure to other potential international investors."

85 new software jobs for Belfast

Page last updated at 11:05 GMT, Friday, 25 June 2010 12:05 UK

The jobs were announced at the Northern Ireland Science Park in Belfast

A total of 85 jobs are to be created in Northern Ireland by a major Indian information technology company.

L&T Infotech has announced it will establish a European software development and maintenance centre in Belfast.

The jobs, from graduate level to highly experienced software engineers and software developers, will be created over the next three years.

The new Belfast centre will be located in the Northern Ireland Science Park.

Enterprise minister Arlene Foster said it was estimated that "when fully implemented" it would "generate annual salaries of £2.9m".

"This significant investment by a global company reflects its recognition that Northern Ireland is a value for money location with a highly skilled workforce and excellent IT infrastructure," she said.

"This mobile investment was not an easy win, but Invest Northern Ireland succeeded in securing it for Northern Ireland against direct competition from the US, the Philippines and South America.

Global

"Developing Northern Ireland's ICT sector is one of Invest NI's priorities and attracting this kind of high quality investment strengthens our international reputation for IT excellence."

L&T Infotech is a global provider of IT services and solutions, with about 12,000 employees worldwide.

Invest Northern Ireland has offered £891,000 of support for the investment in Belfast.

Mr Sudip Banerjee of L&T Infotech, said the new centre would be strategically important for the company's plans "to increase global capacity".

"The centre will also support both European and other global clients," he said.

"We are confident that we will find in Northern Ireland the technical and professional skills that we need and we look forward to developing our presence here."
